

Kyle's Korner

I have often found myself a bit overwhelmed by the many things I do. At times, as I have often stated, it becomes difficult to even keep up with myself! Where I am and what I am doing... On any given day I might be in three different locations for an extended period of time - a few hours here and a few hours there... Maybe you get my point.

I was texting a preacher friend of mine whom I know through my work with the radio station (TGRN) out of Texas. We were discussing my upcoming programs, and he reminded me of something I should never have forgotten, but it seems I have. "Just stay focused on God and know, we are sharing His word and bringing understanding."

Honestly, even keeping up with daily Scripture readings and preparing my lessons each week, it is easy for me to become distracted. These distractions tend to pull me away from truly investing in my personal relationship with God. Even working for the Lord, I almost feel like my life becomes a series of meeting deadlines, rather than really taking the time to talk to God about my needs, desires and fears. If I'm not careful, my focus becomes too much world and not enough God and things that belong to Him.

I hope I haven't worried you. I'm simply being honest about my life. I don't need someone to ease my burdens or to try to help or comfort me. I only need to remind myself - often - of my reason for my life and service. I need to remind myself that all that I am doing is for the purpose of glorifying God!

We all need to be aware that even in all the many things we do, even for God Himself, He doesn't want us simply as His servants. He wants to be our friend and companion. He wants us to trust in Him so we don't become overwhelmed by the daily cares of life.
